FURTHER GENERAL THEORY (12)Before you begin read these instructions carefully:

Candidates offering the whole of this paper should complete two questions from section A, one (and only one) question from section B, and any six more questions, not more than one of which may be from section A unless at least two questions from section E are offered, and at least one of which must be either question 8 or a question from section C, unless this would cause the candidate to fail to submit any question from either the additional section or section E, subject to the constraints that no subset of the questions completed may have question numbers which, when multiplied together, make sixty, that no more than two of the questions done may be from sections labelled with consonants, and that candidates also offering paper 84 (Solanaceae Theory) may not attempt any part of section B; candidates offering half this paper should do half of this, scaling down section quotas as appropriate.

Candidates who do not wish to do the above, or who have not understood it, may instead do all (or half, as appropriate) of section J (seven questions). You are warned that these questions are much harder than the rest of the paper.

Regardless of the above, all candidates doing any part of this paper MUST attempt question 11, because it's especially difficult, and we're very proud of it. Write on one side of the paper only, and begin each answer on a separate sheet.

At the end of the examination:

Tie up the answers from each section in separate bundles. To each bundle, attach a blue (section) cover sheet. For sections A, C, D, F, H, I, and J, and separately for sections B, G, and the additional section, a yellow (master) cover sheet must be completed, listing all questions attempted in these sections. In the interests of gender equality, a light green (mistress) cover sheet must be filled in corresponding to each yellow (master) cover sheet, containing the same information. A pink (cover sheets) cover sheet must also be filled in, giving details of all cover sheets filled in. Finally, a purple (vice-chancellor) cover sheet must be filled in, giving details of all questions done in the entire paper. Should the number of cover sheets fail to exceed the number of pages of answers, brown (additional) cover sheets must be completed until the required total is reached. These must also be entered on the pink (cover sheets) cover sheet, and if a second pink cover sheet is required, a light grey (cover sheets) cover sheet must also be filled in, avoiding Russell's paradox. Every cover sheet must bear your examination number and desk number.

Candidates who have read this far may do none of the above and enter the code TML42 along with their candidate number on a single orange (exemptions) cover sheet, in which case they will automatically get a first.
